Farm Tour with Lunch

Bohol Bee Farm is one of the leading venues for Farm Tourism in the Philippines. Owner and Chef Vicky Wallace prepares delicious meals from organically-grown vegetables on her farm—from squash muffins, vegetable lasagna to her specially-brewed coffee from roasted corn and wild berries.

The Farm is geared towards encouraging and inspiring farmers to practice Organic farming. They don't need to spend for costly conventional fertilizers, nor use harmful pesticides in their farms. Basic composting and companion planting are alternatives they offer in their stead. They also introduce and teach farmers different livelihood activities they can pursue in tandem with farming, and assist them in marketing their products to make such activities sustainable.

The Maribojoc Demo Farm is a haven for all those with green thumbs! It serves as a training ground for students, farmers and hog growers as the farm is blessed with a rich resource of both flora and fauna. Many of these plants and animals are subjects of public enjoyment and sometimes scientific study. The farm also serves as an ideal location for educational trips. During the ecotour, short farm tours are held with activities ranging from full day sessions and farm tour activities such as:

- Rare breed conservation sheep and cattle
- Organic vegetables and arable crops
- Farm machinery
- Flowers, birds, bats, butterflies, dragonflies and much, much, more...

And in this little paradise, you'll be surprised that nothing is put to waste. Anywhere you look in the area, you would see trash bins where solid wastes are properly segregated. The garbage are then decomposed using the suitable earthworms species (Eudrilus eugeniae). Vermicompost and vermimeal are organic fertilizer and feeds, respectively, produced from earthworm thus replacing up to 50 percent of chemical fertilizers used in the gardens and plantations.

When we say organic, we mean fresh fruit and vegetables that are grown with zero exposure to chemical fertilizers, synthetic herbicides or pesticides. You can pick your own fresh fruits in the fields or you can always let the staff in the farm do the picking for you. Otherwise, if you're feeling a bit lazy, you may simply purchase the fresh fruits and vegetables at their stand.
